Majors

Bachelor of Fine Arts

First-year students take Drawing, 2D Design, 3D Design, Digital Studio, and Practices in Art + Design.

Second-year studio courses introduce students to the different areas of focus.

A student's last two years include intense study in their chosen area(s) and a capstone experience. The capstone studio brings together all seniors in the studio areas and separately in the communication design and fashion areas for critical dialogue beyond disciplinary boundaries to guide preparation for a culminating BFA exhibition.

Throughout the studio courses and the final capstone, the BFA degree places an emphasis on developing a portfolio that displays the student's mastery of art and design skills. Graduates are prepared to pursue careers as artists, illustrators or designers.

For specific degree requirements, visit the following pages:

- Art, BFA
- Art with Painting Concentration, BFA
- Art with Photography Concentration, BFA
- Art with Printmaking Concentration, BFA
- Art with Sculpture Concentration, BFA
- Art with Time-Based + Media Art Concentration, BFA
- Communication Design, BFA
- Fashion Design, BFA

Bachelor of Arts

First-year students take Digital Studio and two additional foundation courses that may include Drawing, 2D Design, 3D Design, and so on. Upper-level studio courses and Sam Fox electives introduce students to different areas of focus.

With fewer required courses and no capstone studio, this degree provides an opportunity for students to explore art and design in the context of a rigorous liberal arts education. The BA program is ideal for students who are interested in studying art and design as a cultural phenomena, as a practice for strategic thinking, or as preparation for a career alongside artists and designers. Working within and between traditional disciplines, students will explore how ideas can shape materials and how materiality can shape ideas.

- Art, BA
- Design, BA
- Design with Communication Concentration, BA
- Design with Fashion Concentration, BA

Second Majors in Art & Design

A student pursuing a bachelor's degree in Architecture, Arts & Sciences, Business, or Engineering may also pursue a second major in the College of Art. Second majors are offered in art and design. The design program has optional concentrations in fashion and communication. Any student in good academic standing may declare a second major. Upon completion of the requirements, the student's transcript will show the second major along with their earned degree. Only one diploma is granted; no reference to the second major is noted on the diploma.

For specific degree requirements, visit the following pages:

- Second Major in Art
- Second Major in Design
- Second Major in Design: Communication Concentration
- Second Major in Design: Fashion Concentration

Second Majors and Minors Outside the College of Art

Students may earn a second major or minor in the College of Arts & Sciences, the Olin Business School, or the McKelvey School of Engineering, or they may earn a minor in the College of Architecture while completing the requirements for the BFA or BA degree. Students who choose this path will graduate with their chosen art or design degree and major (BFA or BA) alongside the additional major or minor.

Students must successfully complete all of the degree requirements for the College of Art and all of the requirements for the second major or minor.

The second major or minor option can be completed within four years if careful planning begins during the first year. If a student is interested in these options, they should consult with the associate dean of students in the College of Art.

Art Education

Students who wish to teach art at the elementary and secondary levels may obtain Missouri state certification by taking additional units of required education courses offered by the university's Department of Education in the College of Arts & Sciences. These courses may be taken as academic electives within the BFA or BA program. For more information, visit the Department of Education's Teacher Certification page.
