

Bachelor of Science in Integrated Studies Programs

The Bachelor of Science in Integrated Studies (BSIS), a customizable degree created for the needs of modern learners, offers innovative and flexible concentrations designed around each student's prior experiences and specific career goals. The BSIS aligns with students' professional and educational goals, pairing an in-depth field of study with a certificate that helps one upskill or reskill for future employment. Based on the demands of the regional workforce, the BSIS program ensures graduates are well-prepared for today's job market in a variety of fields.

For more specific information about BSIS degree requirements and policies, as well as specific requirements for each major, refer to the second tab on this page.
